

Elio Catania (Catania, 1946), after graduating in Engineering from La Sapienza University of Rome, received a Master in Management Science at the MIT Sloan School of Management in Boston.

He began his professional career at IBM, which he joined in 1970, and where he held important positions both in Italy and abroad. Specifically, he held the role of Vice President of Marketing for IBM Europe, CEO and General Manager of IBM Italy, Chairman of IBM Latin America and Chairman of IBM South Europe. From 2004 to 2006 he was Chairman and Managing Director of Ferrovie dello Stato.

He is currently Vice President of Assonime (Association of Italian Joint Stock Companies) and a member of the management board of Confindustria, as well as Vice President of the Council for Italy-US Relations.

As at date of first appointment: 02/01/2007.